McCord Museum's Online Collection

By Andrea Lister

www.mccord-museum.qc.ca/en/keys/collections/

"The McCord Museum conserves and presents over 1,375,000 objects, images and manuscripts that are irreplaceable reflections of the social history and material culture of Montreal, Quebec and Canada. Currently, the "Keys to History" digital on-line collection -- created in collaboration with seven other museums -- is made up of 135,000 artifacts. Almost 117,000 artifacts held by the McCord and some 17,500 artifacts held by the partner museums are available for viewing."

I did a keyword search for the name PLATT. The result showed fourteen images as part of the Notman Photographic Archives Collection. One of the results is a portrait of John Platt, my 5th great-grandfather.

You can download the image in different resolutions; McCord Museum provides the HTML code so you can link to the image from your own website ; you can print, it, send it as a postcard, or order a print for CDN $20 per image plus shipping and handling and applicable taxes.

As well, the information about the print also proved to be a useful clue as well: "copied for Mr. Skaife". I had no idea if the Skaife family was connected to my tree. Further research determined that John Platt's great-granddaughter, Elizabeth Platt married Adam Skaife. Adam Skaife turns out to be the first non-Molson family member to participate in brewery ownership.

Footnote Celebrates Moon Landing Anniversary With Big Announcement

www.footnote.com

“Footnote is excited to announce their partnership with the largest newspaper publisher in the U.S., the Gannett Company. Gannett publishes over 84 daily newspapers, including USA Today. Through this partnership, Footnote Members can access historical newspapers never seen before on the internet.

In celebration of the 40th anniversary of the Moon Landing and Woodstock, we have kicked off our partnership by digitizing the newspapers covering these events. Recently, we launched the first runs of Florida Today and the Poughkeepsie Journal (NY). Footnote will continue to digitize the full run of those newspapers including all of the Poughkeepsie Journal, which dates back to 1785.

Visit our Moon Landing and Woodstock pages today and relive the 60s, man! “
